

State Service Award

Dennis Nolan

Dennis Nolan has been a member of the Frankston Photographic Club for 14 years. During that time, he has been a committee member and he was part of the Special Interest Groups that were a key focus of the club's formative years in training members in post-production, file management and photography.

Dennis was made a life member of the club around 2009 in recognition of his service.

In addition to supporting the club he joined APS in 2007 and soon became involved in the development of image management systems in support of the many APS photographic competitions held annually in Australia. His involvement in APS has been a major focus of his recent years. This dedication and voluntary help to APS benefits photographers not just at club or state level but right across Australia.

Dennis has recently been appointed to the Management Committee of APS where his experience, guidance and knowledge of systems and photographic competitions are immensely valued.

He is also the State Representative for APS and is available to local and prospective new members for advice on APS and its services to photographers, another busy task for Dennis.

Whilst he may not be well known at state level his behind the scene's work is typical of the many people who give their time freely to promote and support the amateur photographers in Australia.

It is because of his continued work and diligence over many years that VAPS has no hesitation in awarding Dennis Nolan the State Service Award.
